“Flushed Away (the Game)” has won the Annual Annie Awards in the ‘Best Animated Video Game’ category!

Animation’s highest Honor, Annie Awards to expand the D3 overseas operations!

On February 11, 2007, the American subsidiary of D3Publisher Inc. (Tokyo Shibuya, CEO Yuji Itoh), D3Publisher of America, Inc. (California, COO Yoji Takenaka, D3PA hereafter) has been awarded for the 34th Annual Annie Awards in the “Best Animated Video Game” category for video game “Flushed Away (the Game).” The Award is hosted by the Hollywood branch of the Association Internationale du Film d’Animation, also known as ASIFA-Hollywood.

D3Publisher is the only Japanese organization which was awarded this year. The group hopes that the award will be a great leap forward in the industry.

About “Flushed Away (the Game)”

“Flushed Away (the Game)” is a video game based on the CG animation film from Dream Works Animation and Aardman. The October 2006 release in North America coincided with the release of the movie, and Europe followed with their release in the following months.

About the Annie Awards

Known as the Academy Awards of animation, the Annie Awards awards/celebrates a wide variety of animation media (gamesoft, movie, TV, Commercial, etc.) each year. ASIFA-Hollywood committee selects their nominees each year, after which the winner is selected in a vote from a group comprised of industry participants. The “Best Animated Video Game”category, which was awarded to D3Publisher this year, was awarded to “Ultimate Spider-Man”last year.
